

A LETTER TO AN ASPIRING ANOMALIST: ANDY ANSWERS AUSTRALIAN ANALYST

Aspiring Australian Anomaly Analyst: As I was closely studying the NASA photograph captioned PIA10214, all I noticed was that just below the first hill on the left, located directly above the center of the left solar panel, is a rock that looks like a fossil of segmented bones, like that of a hand or animal limb. Is this possible, or maybe this is due to distortions in filming? As far as any other evidence of life as you have suggested, I could not find any evidence that you described to be in the picture. Are you for real or just wasting people's time with deceptive information?

Andrew D. Basiago
The discoverer of life on Mars

Andy: I am for real and I am not wasting people's time with any deceptive information. I am legitimate and my disclosure is a matter of utmost public seriousness. I have made a profound discovery and I have announced it to the world knowing that it would change people's perceptions about life in the Universe.

I have published my credentials along with my disclosure documents at www.exopolitics.com, so that readers can verify the fact that I am an honest, hard-working, well-educated, thoughtful, professional individual with a substantial record of accomplishment who would never hoax anything and would take great risk in doing so.

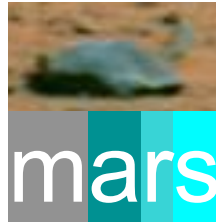

I would urge you to read my landmark, 41-page paper The Discovery of Life on Mars to evaluate the evidence that I have gathered. In it, I make 50 original contributions to science.

My case for life on Mars is laid out in this paper, which constitutes substantial evidence that far outweighs any superficial evidence presented by a casual observer, a reactionary skeptic, or a government disinformant.

If you cannot see or find the evidence in the pictures that I have included in my paper, then I would urge you to read the PDF of my paper on a new laptop with a state-of-the-art screen and imaging chip. Computer technologies vary. In order to believe something, you must first see it. On the very best systems, the evidence for life on Mars is not a matter of subjective interpretation, as were The Face on Mars at Cydonia and other previous anomalies on the Red Planet. Rather, it is as objectively obvious as a photograph in a magazine is recognizable as what the magazine's editors purport it to be.

I am not certain how you analyzed NASA photograph PIA10214 independently, with the resources that you have available to you, but I can say that this photograph contains abundant evidence of humanoid beings, animal species, carved statues, and built structures that I – and a growing cadre of Mars anomaly researchers that have been contacting me – have verified using various different methodologies.

I have discovered corroborating evidence of life on Mars, which I will be revealing shortly, in yet another photograph taken by the Mars Exploration Rover Spirit from the Home Plate Plateau in the inner basin of the Columbia Hills range inside the Gusev Crater of Mars.

A Letter to an Aspiring Anomalist, page 2

Our initial investigation has revealed that NASA has been manipulating the scale of these images to make objects look too big, and thus diffuse, or too small, so that they look like “just rocks.” After spending a month evaluating PIA10214 with the proper imaging equipment, I am confident that my case for life on Mars is accurate and provable and will be proved to a moral, a legal, and a scientific certainty, which is why I have decided to move forward and disclose this information in such a bold way.

I would also like to point out to you that the worst of the disinformationists who are now vilifying me personally on the World Wide Web, while simultaneously misrepresenting my evidence or not presenting it at all, have past linkages to NASA or other branches of the US military. In fact, they even brag about such credentials in the biographies that they publish about themselves on the home pages of their blogs, as if being biased or brainwashed as a result of past service in NASA or other US military agencies somehow establishes their objectivity, when, in fact, it establishes just the opposite.

I am as patriotic as any other American, but being a partisan of NASA or the space science establishment or the military should be viewed for what it is, namely, that in a de facto sense, one is basically a publicist for the party line that no life has been detected elsewhere in the Universe, that Earth has never been visited by extraterrestrials, and so on. What is so tragic about such individuals is their failure to see that nobody believes those official lies anymore.

NASA is a military agency, and to challenge NASA on the condign evidence of life on Mars found through careful scrutiny of its own photographs published on the World Wide Web for all to see is to break the conspiracy of silence that has surrounded the subject of life beyond planet Earth for many decades now.

This conspiracy of silence resulted from the CIA’s Robertson Panel report in 1952-53, when it was decided that the public would not be informed about any findings of extraterrestrial life, that such findings would be debunked, and that those who did the right thing – who told the people the truth about the fact that the Universe is inhabited – would be ridiculed and subjected to orchestrated public smear campaigns.

Well, that is what has happened in my case. They have said that I am a lunatic. They have said that I am a drug addict – which, I might add, was one of the types of “debunking” recommended by the Robertson Panel itself. They have even made fun of my Polish surname, which is an example of bigotry per se. All of their statements have been false attacks directed at me rather than at my very persuasive evidence. They are of the same ilk that burned Giordano Bruno at the stake and tried to force Galileo Galilei to recant that the Earth revolves around the Sun when he was taken before the Inquisition in 1633. Theirs is the movement to stifle free thought and free inquiry in our world. They are the Flat Earthers of the 21st Century. They are pre-Copernican in their outlook, and I am delighted to tell you that another Pole shall be the catalyst of their enlightenment.

I hope that you will begin to see what defines the contours of the cover-up around life on Mars, and that I have helped clarify for you the courageous nature of my quest to defeat that cover-up. The data is there. It is in NASA’s own photographs. Mars is inhabited. That fact will ultimately be proved and accepted by society, and my discovery will one day be celebrated rather than censored by science, for as the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. once said, “The arc of time is long, but it bends towards justice.” And justice – I would remind you – is truth in action!
